

ABSTRACT

A lightweight and portable, yet strong and stable support device formed from a horizontal support member, a set of leg members, and a collapsible attachment means. The present device is easily modified between its collapsed and support position, thereby providing for efficient and use. In its collapsed position, the device may be easily moved from place to place. In its extended position, the device provides for excellent stability in withstanding sheer and lateral forces with respect to its support frame.